the ride.

The express carried messages on lissue paper, weighing half an ounce and costing 25 for each dispatch. While the enterprise was an immense convenience, the line did not pay one-tenth of the expense, to say nothing of the interest on the capital.

Two notable achievements of the pony express were the carrying of President Euchanan's last message to congress, December, 1898, from the Missouri river to Sacramento, a distance of 2,006 miles, in eight days and a few hours, and carrying Lincoin's haugural address March 4, 1861, over the same route in seven days, the quickest time on record in this or any other country.

Perhaps one of the most remarkable rides ever made was by F. N. Aubrey,

The Indians attacked the stage at Pacific Springs and seriously wounded Lem Fewler, who had come on to succeed Stade at the lower division.

Although Mr. Dobson's work was during the most dangerous period of staging, he always managed to get through uninjured. He was widely known at the time as "The Mormon Messenger," and was associated with John Hardie, who, as an outrider, worked for Wood Revnolds, who was killed by the Indians near Cann Flood. Mr. Dobson's life during all those years was one of constant peril and adventure, and he had the regutation of being one of the bravest and most transvorthy ince employed in the daring occumation. His many adventures would fill a book, but he is a modest man and cannot be induced in these plping days of peace to plume himself on his past performances.
